“Survey Says,” attempts to create a best practice assessment model of service-learning community partners which could be easily modified to correspond with university or community college service-learning programs.

Drs. Linda Barboa and Wafaa Kaf
“Cognitive Impairment: Reducing Confusion by Increasing Communication”
The project’s goal was to investigate the effectiveness of socialization visits in improving communication skills and the accuracy of hearing evaluations in individuals with cognitive disorders. This is a challenging population for health care providers as accurate hearing evaluations are typically difficult, if not impossible, to obtain. Speech-Language Pathology and Audiology students and faculty collaborated on this research project.
